Utility of fluorine-18 fluorodeoxyglucose positron emission tomography/computed tomography in the management of urothelial carcinoma of the renal pelvis: A meta-analysis. We performed a meta-analysis to evaluate the role of fluorine-18 fluorodeoxyglucose positron emission tomography (FDG-PET) and fluorine-18 fluorodeoxyglucose positron emission tomography/computed tomography (FDG PET/CT) in the staging of urothelial carcinoma of the renal pelvis. We searched the database for articles on FDG PET/CT in patients with urothelial carcinoma of the renal pelvis. A meta-analysis was performed using the software STATA 12.0. Thirty-three articles were included. The pooled sensitivity of FDG PET/CT in the detection of LN metastasis was 73% (95% CI, 66-80%). The pooled specificity was 93% (95% CI, 90-95%). The pooled sensitivity of FDG PET/CT in the detection of distant metastasis was 55% (95% CI, 46-64%). The pooled specificity was 89% (95% CI, 85-92%). The pooled sensitivity in predicting the presence of perinephric extension was 88% (95% CI, 83-92%). The pooled specificity was 96% (95% CI, 91-99%). The pooled sensitivity in predicting pelvic lymph node metastasis was 63% (95% CI, 56-69%). The pooled specificity was 93% (95% CI, 87-96%). There were no statistically significant differences between FDG PET/CT and CT, CT alone, or the combination of both CT and FDG PET/CT in predicting LN metastasis in patients with urothelial carcinoma of the renal pelvis. However, FDG PET/CT provided more accurate results than CT or CT alone and may improve the management of urothelial carcinoma of the renal pelvis.Q: RSpec doubles the number of tests run in a feature spec Using Rails 4.2.0 and RSpec 3.1, I noticed that when I executed my feature specs, all of the tests are being run twice. Inspired by sound and vision, Franz Krieger spent a lifetime on a quest for the strongest music. His recordings and performances have been praised by the likes of the composer, Philip Glass, and the late composer, Pauline Oliveros. Leading Music to Free Your Mind Franz Krieger's Jazz Improvisations for Healing the Body and Soul Reviews and Awards It is the nature of improvisation that the music is never identical to what was previously heard. Fran Krieger: Music To Heal The Body And Soul, like his earlier CD, Do The Dance, and for the same reason, is a rewarding and challenging listening experience. - Patrick J. Lynch, Jazz Times (Jazz.com) Both the soft, clear voice of Krieger's mid-range alto sax playing, and his crisp, emotionally nuanced trumpet riffs, are examples of the guitarist who not only plays much better than anyone I've heard him cover in any other context, but who also has a style I find in perfect harmony with the passionate kind of playing he employs as improviser, improviser-composer, or whatever it is he does in the recording studio - Jon J. Muth A demanding and intriguing collection of music from a prolific and heady saxophonist who, in a long career of outstanding performances, has still managed to make his very highest energies accessible to those who most need them. Most impressive of all is the fact that Krieger has never been predictable, never a star-calibre artist who ran with the band. Instead, his writing shines, his playing speaks his mind, and his music is not less than extraordinary. - Michael Anthony One of the best available out-of-the-pavement releases of the past 10 years. Krieger's music is wide-ranging, encompassing everything from free improvisation to rock and Indian music. The Free Jazz guitarist is hardly ever repetitive, and his music is steeped in a very "European" vibe, with a touch of English "cool" that also allows for a number of subtle, kind of dark, pieces that make you feel like you are in a retreat from the world, and your own personal distress - Gergely Madaras Franz Krieger is a musician's musician. His music, and voice are passionate, one-of
