What's New In Services Screensaver?

A screen saver that disables and enables various services running on your computer. You can select the services to enable and disable. For example, if you have used an application like RealPlayer for watching videos, you can disable it and enable Internet Explorer. If you enable Internet Explorer, you can then disable not only RealPlayer, but also Mozilla Firefox, Netscape, Opera and even file searching. It's also possible to disable services like ActiveX, Filemon, and tasks are stopped. If you are not satisfied with the quality of the service, you can change the settings very easily: just add new services, delete old services or specify which services you want to run. Features:

- Windows Vista compatible
- Disables and enables any Windows service
- Disables and enables all active services
- Configure the order of disabling services
- Filter the list with wildcards
- Sort the list with wildcards
- Filter specific service by name, process, or service type
- Specify the time period during which the service should run
- Command line options for better control Advanced Services Screensaver creates a 'screen saver' using your registry settings. Rather than sit there and eat your cpu cycles, it allows you to easily configure the screen saver to show a certain desktop background, shows files you want to display and even to shut off some programs or services. Advanced Services Screensaver saves your window positions. Advanced Services Screensaver also supports Vista's new screensavers, like the animated gifs. Advanced Services Screensaver allows you to easily configure the screen saver ChessScope is a free chess application for Windows.
